

Dev Blog - Just about ready to go live

Things are pretty crazy right now with CS ramping up for launch very soon while there is still a lot of work to be done.

As I've mentioned before, we're building the site live, which means, you can pretty much watch as we add new features and functionality and tweak the look and feel.

We'll have new content going up this weekend and all week next week. We're working hard on the un-named feature that will be the heart and soul of CommerceStyle once live. I'm going allowed to go into detail about the feature, but I can say that it may have been done before, but we'll do way better and that will be obvious.

I can tell you that starting this weekend, you'll see our e-commerce news section go live. This section will feature the latest happenings in the e-commerce industry, and best of all, you'll be invited to register a CS account and submit articles! We're more than happy to post press releases as well just as long as they are relevant to e-commerce. So send them our way for some free exposure.

We'll also go live with some e-commerce book reviews which our users will be encouraged to send in.

That's about all I've got for now.

Take care

Travis