Icons are a great way to help divide and organize your web content with very little overhead. Just the right icon can usually turn a halfway bland image into a great looking graphic. The problem is free icons aren't easy to find. Google image search does a down right terrible job of finding web icons, and the ones it does find are rarely free to use.

Enter IconFinder.net. I came across this website just a few days ago and bookmarked it right away. Not only does IconFinder give you access to tons of great free icons, their front end UI is an Ajax powered search that makes finding the perfect icons easy as pie.

If you're in need of some icons to make your work stand out, be sure to check out this site!
